1–5. Records management (recordkeeping) requirements

a. The records management requirement for all record numbers, associated forms, and reports required by this regulation are addressed in the Records Retention Schedule–Army (RRS–A). Detailed information for all related record numbers, forms, and reports are located in the Army Records Information Management System (ARIMS)/RRS–A at <https://www.arims.army.mil>. If any record numbers, forms, and reports are not current, addressed, and/or published correctly in ARIMS/RRS–A, see DA Pam 25–403 for guidance.

b. Case files will be maintained for disciplinary and adverse actions initiated and/or effected. The file will be maintained electronically or as a hard copy file in accordance with current policies and procedures related to case file system requirements. Case files will be kept apart from the electronic Official Personnel Folder (eOPF) and retained for a minimum of 4 years, or as long as the documents are needed, but not more than 7 years after the action is closed, unless needed due to litigation. Upon request, the information in the file will be furnished to the employee whom the action was taken against, their designated representative (to include a designated union official), or an appropriate third party adjudicating authority. All documents related to the disciplinary or adverse actions are subject to 5 USC 552a. The case file will contain, at a minimum, the following documents:

- (1) The notice of proposed action with supporting documents;
- (2) The written reply and/or summary of the oral reply from the employee, if any;
- (3) The notice of decision; and
- (4) Any order effecting the action, together with any supporting material.

1–6. Objective

a. The objective of discipline is to encourage and motivate (teach, train, and develop) Army employees to take responsibility and ownership for the rules, regulations, and standards of conduct applicable to the DA, and to prevent prohibited activities. The supervisor’s most effective means of maintaining discipline is through the promotion of cooperation, sustained good working relationships, self-discipline, and responsible performance.

b. Supervisors will take informal disciplinary, formal disciplinary, and adverse actions for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service by ensuring high standards of Government service and maintaining public confidence in the DA. Maximum flexibility to pursue the appropriate disciplinary or adverse action should be exercised in accordance with what is fair and reasonable. After determining that misconduct occurred and corrective action is warranted, discipline should be initiated as soon as practicable and should be tailored to the totality of the facts and circumstances of the offending conduct.

c. Supervisors must exercise due diligence to gather all of the facts relevant to the situation at hand and conduct a thorough analysis to decide the appropriate penalty regardless if the ultimate role is to be the proposing or deciding official on a disciplinary or adverse action matter.

d. In deciding whether to take a disciplinary or adverse action an employee will not be discriminated against on the basis of race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy and gender identity), national origin, age, disability, genetic information (including family medical history), marital status, political affiliation, sexual orientation, labor organization affiliation or non-affiliation, status as a parent, or any other non-merit-based factor, or retaliation for exercising rights with respect to the foregoing protected categories, or the Whistleblower Protection Act.

1–7. Labor relations obligations

Management officials and supervisors will adhere to the provisions of applicable CBAs and fulfill all statutory and contractual labor relations obligations identified in 5 USC 7101 in advance of implementation and administration of this regulation. Questions concerning labor relations obligations should be addressed with the servicing CPAC and servicing legal office.

Chapter 2 Procedures

2–1. Informal actions

Informal actions include oral admonishments, a verbal counseling/warning, or written counseling/warning memorandums, or any other similar documentation not otherwise covered under paragraph 2–2. These actions may be used when an offense does not, by itself, warrant a formal disciplinary action, but could progress to a formal disciplinary action if there is a recurrence of misconduct.

a. An oral admonishment or verbal counseling/warning may be documented by email or memorandum for record for the management official's records.

b. Informal actions may not be counted as a prior disciplinary action when determining an appropriate penalty under the Table of Offenses and Penalties, nor do they become matters of record in the employee's eOPF.

c. Informal actions may be cited in future disciplinary or adverse actions as evidence the employee was made aware of acceptable standards of conduct or performance and the employee was given notice that future instances of misconduct could result in disciplinary action.

2–2. Formal disciplinary and adverse actions

a. Formal disciplinary actions. Disciplinary actions are usually initiated by an employee's first-level supervisor in their chain of command, and require procedural due process, including an entitlement to an advanced written notice of the reasons for an action, an opportunity to reply, and a written decision following that response. Disciplinary actions not covered by 5 Code of Federal Regulation (CFR) 752 (for example, letter of reprimand), present no procedural due process entitlements. A letter of reprimand is a formal action for disciplinary purposes.

(1) A letter of reprimand will—

(a) Include the infraction and reason(s) for the reprimand, and how it promotes the efficiency of the service.

(b) If applicable, include reference to any past counseling or other attempts to correct the employee's behavior.

(c) Provide a warning that future misconduct may result in a more severe action.

(d) Include the employee's right to file a grievance either under a negotiated grievance procedure or administrative grievance procedure, as appropriate.

(e) Contain a statement that a copy of the letter of reprimand will be placed in the employee's eOPF for a specified period, typically not to exceed 3 years.

(f) Include, if appropriate, information regarding services or assistance (for example, EAP) available to the employee.

(g) Provide opportunity for acknowledgment by the employee. A letter of reprimand presents no procedural due process entitlement to advanced written notice of the reasons for an action, opportunity to reply, and written decision following that response period. Acknowledgment only establishes receipt by the employee, not agreement with the action itself. If an employee refuses to acknowledge receipt, the management official will note the date that it was presented to the employee and annotate on the memorandum that the employee refused or declined to sign. The employee will be given a copy of the memorandum for their records.

(2) The letter of reprimand is effective on presentation and/or receipt by the employee, regardless of whether the employee refused/declined to sign.

(3) The letter of reprimand will be maintained in the employee's eOPF until one of the following is met:

(a) The expiration of the period specified in the memorandum;

(b) The departure of the employee from the DA;

(c) A determination through an appropriate adjudicatory procedure, or by an appropriate management official that the reprimand is not warranted and must be withdrawn;

(d) A determination by the management official that the employee has sufficiently corrected their behavior and the letter of reprimand has served its purpose; or

(e) When a letter of reprimand had been cited or relied upon in another disciplinary action, all evidence of the reprimand will not be expunged. A copy of the letter of reprimand will be retained in the case file for the purposes of documenting the employee's disciplinary record.

b. Adverse actions. Prior to implementation of any adverse action impacting an employee's pay, the employee is entitled to procedural due process. This includes advanced written notice of the reasons for the action, the right to review the material relied upon (when requesting), an opportunity to reply, and a written decision. Adverse actions will be initiated by the proposing official, who is generally the first-level supervisor in the employee's chain of command. The final decision to suspend, reduce in grade or pay, or furlough or remove from Federal Service, will be made by the deciding official, who is normally a supervisor higher in the employee's chain of command than the supervisor who proposed the action. The proposing official and deciding official are usually different management officials; however, for actions effected under 5 CFR 752, one official may serve as both the proposing official and deciding official when circumstances warrant. Prior to initiating or taking a disciplinary or adverse action, it will be coordinated with the servicing CPAC and servicing legal office.

c. Suspensions of 14 days or less. An employee may be suspended from duty and pay for a period of 1 to 14 calendar days for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service. If effected, a suspension becomes a permanent record in the employee's eOPF, as documented by a Standard Form (SF) 50 (Notification of Personnel Action). Suspensions of 14 calendar days or less may be grieved, but are not appealable to the MSPB.

(1) The notice of proposed suspension will—

(a) Include the proposed length of the suspension.

(b) Include notification of the employee's duty status during the advanced notice period.

(c) Include a description of the specific charges, specifications, and details pertaining to the impact on the efficiency of the service, in order to allow the employee to understand and reply to the reasoning for the proposed suspension. The notice should discuss the relevant aggravating factors (including, but not limited to, factors enumerated in Douglas v. Veterans Administration, 5 Merit Systems Protection Report (MSPR) 280 (1981), hereafter referred to as, "the Douglas Factors"), that were considered for determining the penalty. The proposing official should not complete a Douglas Factor worksheet as this is the responsibility of the deciding official.

(d) If applicable, include reference to any past counseling, discipline, or other attempts to correct the employee's behavior and any other matters considered in determining the proposed action.

(e) Inform the employee of the right to review the material relied upon in support of the proposed action.

(f) Inform the employee of the right to provide a response, orally, in writing, or both, to the deciding official and the time (not less than 24 hours) for the response, and of the right to furnish affidavits, and other documentary evidence in support of the reply.

(g) Inform the employee of their right to request an extension to their reply period, along with the process and point of contact (deciding official) for doing so. Employees should be advised to include their reasoning within the request for consideration in granting/denying the extension, along with the amount of time being requested.

(h) Inform the employee of their right to representation by an attorney, union official, or other representative, as appropriate, but that management may disallow a representative who has a conflict of interest (for example, supervisor, HR/Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Specialist), whose duties will not allow release, and/or whose services would give rise to unreasonable costs to the government.

(i) Include the name, title, and contact information of the deciding official to hear and/or receive the employee's response to the proposed action.

(j) Contain a statement that no decision has been made or will be made until after the reply has been received and considered, or until after the reply period has expired.

(k) Include detailed information with respect to the right of the employee to appeal the action, the forums in which the employee may file an appeal, and any limitations on the rights of the employee that would apply because of the forum in which the employee decides to file an appeal.

(l) Be signed and dated by the proposing official.

(m) The reply period begins the day following the memorandum's presentation to the employee.

(n) Provide opportunity for acknowledgment by the employee. This only establishes receipt by the employee, not agreement with the action itself. If an employee refuses to acknowledge receipt the proposing official will note the date that the proposed notice was presented to the employee and annotate on the memorandum that the employee refused or declined to sign. The employee will be given a copy of the memorandum for their records.

(2) Upon expiration of the reply period the deciding official will, after considering all relevant information, including all applicable aggravating and mitigating factors (including, but not limited to, the Douglas Factors), and coordinating with CPAC, issue a notice of decision to the employee. To the extent practicable, the decision should be issued within 15 business days of the end of the employee reply period. If the deciding official considers any information that was not included in the notice of proposed action, the deciding official must give the employee an opportunity to respond to the information before reaching a final decision. The deciding official will consult the CPAC and servicing legal office for proper procedures if this occurs. The deciding official may not increase the penalty from what was proposed, without ensuring the employee receives due process and a new notice of proposal is issued.

(3) The notice of decision will—

(a) Inform the employee that only the reason(s) specified in the notice of proposed action and reply, if any, were considered.

(b) Include which charges, specifications, and/or narrative (as applicable), were sustained or not sustained. The deciding official may sustain, reduce, or cancel the proposed action in its entirety. Specify the reasons for the decision, including what information was considered in arriving at a final decision (for example, information from the notice of proposal, supporting documentation, the employee's response(s), and applicable Douglas Factors).

(c) If the employee did not provide a reply, a statement to that effect should be included.

(d) Advise the employee of the availability of the EAP or other resources, as applicable.

(e) Inform the employee of the right to file a grievance (administrative or negotiated grievance procedure), or if applicable, a complaint of discrimination, or a whistleblower complaint with the Office of Special Counsel, any limitations contained in these forums, and the filing deadlines for each.

(f) Advise the employee of the decision, its effective date, and, if the decision is to uphold a suspension of any length, the return-to-duty date from the suspension.

(g) Be signed and dated by the deciding official.

(h) The notice of decision will be delivered to the employee and acknowledged by the employee. If an employee refuses to acknowledge receipt of the notice, the deciding official will annotate the date that it was presented to the employee and annotate on the memorandum that the employee refused or declined to sign. The employee will be given a copy of the memorandum for their records.

(4) The deciding official taking the action will provide the following to the CPAC for inclusion in the official case file as soon as feasible following receipt/presentation to employee:

(a) A copy of the signed proposal memorandum;

(b) Employee's written reply, if any;

(c) A summary of the employee's oral reply, if any;

(d) Copies of documents considered in arriving at the final decision; and

(e) A copy of the signed decision memorandum.

d. Removals, reduction in grade or pay (or other like action), suspensions for more than 14 days, or furloughs for 30 days or less. These adverse actions are effected for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service. If effected, the action becomes a permanent record in the employee's eOPF, as documented by a SF 50. These actions may not be grieved under the administrative grievance procedure, but may be grieved under certain negotiated grievance procedures, where they are not excluded. These actions are appealable to the MSPB. Before initiating an administrative furlough action, consult with the servicing CPAC to ensure all requirements of 10 USC 1597, DoDI 1400.25, and AR 690–300 are met, where applicable. Prior to effecting any adverse action, an employee is entitled to at least 30 days advance written notice proposing the action, a reasonable opportunity to respond to the charges, and a written decision. To the extent practicable the written notice will be limited to 30 days as prescribed in 5 USC 7513(b)(1). These actions will—

(1) Provide advance notice of proposed action that—

(a) Identify the action being proposed (for example, suspension and number of days proposed).

(b) Include notification of the employee's duty status during the advanced notice period.

(c) Include a description of the specific charges and specifications, and details pertaining to the impact on the efficiency of the service, in order to allow employee to understand and reply to the reasoning for the proposed adverse action. The notice should discuss the relevant aggravating factors that were considered for determining the penalty.

(d) If applicable, include reference to any past counseling, discipline, or other attempts to correct the employee's behavior, and any other matters considered in determining the proposed action (see para 2-1 if past disciplinary actions were informal).

(e) Inform the employee of the right to review the material relied on in support of the proposed action.

(f) Inform the employee of their right to provide a response, orally, in writing, or both, to the deciding official and the time (no less than 7 days) for the response, and of the right to furnish affidavits and other documentary evidence in support of the reply.

(g) Inform the employee of their right to request an extension to their reply period, along with the process and point of contact (Deciding Official) for doing so. Employees should be advised to include their reasoning within the request for consideration, along with the amount of time being requested.

(h) Inform the employee of their right to representation by an attorney, union official, or other representative, as appropriate, but that management may disallow a representative having a conflict of interest (for example, supervisor, management official, or HR/EEO Specialist), whose duties will not allow release, and/or whose services would give rise to unreasonable costs to the government.

(i) Include the name, title, and contact information of the deciding official to hear, and/or receive, the employee's response to the proposed action.

(j) Contain a statement that no decision has been made or will be made until after the reply has been received and considered, or until after the reply period has passed.

(k) Include detailed information with respect to the right of the employee to appeal the action, the forums in which the employee may file an appeal, and any limitations on the rights of the employee that would apply because of the forum in which the employee decides to file an appeal.

(l) Be signed and dated by the proposing official.

(m) Include acknowledgement by the employee. The notice of proposal will be delivered to the employee and the employee will be provided an opportunity to acknowledge. If an employee refuses to acknowledge receipt of the notice, the proposing official will note the date that it was presented to the employee.

(n) The reply period begins the day following the memorandum's presentation to the employee.

(2) Upon expiration of the reply period the deciding official will, after considering all relevant information, including all applicable aggravating and mitigating factors (including, but not limited to, the Douglas Factors), and coordinating with CPAC, issue a notice of decision to the employee. To the extent practicable decisions on proposed removals should be issued within 15 business days of the end of the employee reply period. Deciding officials will generally not consider information not included in the notice of proposed action, however if circumstances warrant their inclusion they must first consult the CPAC and servicing legal office to determine if an additional notice is required to ensure proper due process. The deciding official may not increase the penalty from what was proposed without ensuring the employee receives due process and a new notice of proposal is issued. In this case the deciding official must consult with the servicing CPAC and legal office.

(3) The notice of decision will—

(a) Inform the employee that only the reason(s) specified in the notice of proposed action and reply, if any, were considered.

(b) Include which charges, specifications, and/or narrative (as applicable) were sustained or not sustained. The deciding official may sustain, reduce, or cancel the proposed action in its entirety. Specify the reasons for the decision including what information was considered in arriving at a final decision (for example, information from the proposed notice, supporting documentation, the employee's response(s), and applicable Douglas Factors).

(c) If the employee did not provide a reply, a statement to that effect should be included.

(d) Advise the employee of the availability of the EAP or other resources, as applicable.

(e) Inform the employee of the right to file an MSPB appeal, a grievance through the negotiated grievance procedure (if applicable), a complaint of discrimination, or a whistleblower complaint with the Office of Special Counsel, any limitations contained in these forums, and the filing deadlines for each.

(f) Provide the employee access to the MSPB's appeal form, regulations, and information on electronic filing of an appeal.

(g) Advise the employee of the decision, its effective date, and if the decision is to suspend, include the return-to-duty date from the suspension.

(h) Be signed and dated by the deciding official.

(i) The notice of decision will be delivered to the employee and the employee will be provided an opportunity to acknowledge by the employee. If an employee refuses to acknowledge receipt of the notice, the deciding official will annotate the date that it was presented to the employee and annotate on the memorandum that the employee refused or declined to sign. The employee will be given a copy of the memorandum for their records.

(4) The deciding official taking the action will provide to the CPAC for inclusion in the official case file as soon as feasible upon receipt/presentation to employee the following:

- (a) A copy of the signed proposal memorandum;
- (b) Employee's written reply, if any;
- (c) A summary of the employee's oral reply, if any;
- (d) Copies of documents considered in arriving at the final decision; and
- (e) A copy of the signed decision memorandum.

e. Indefinite suspension. An indefinite suspension is an adverse action where an employee is placed in a temporary status without duties and pay for an indeterminate period of time. Management must use adverse action procedures and show that it imposed the suspension for an authorized reason, that the suspension has an ascertainable end (an event that will trigger the conclusion of the suspension), that the suspension bears a relationship (nexus) to the efficiency of the service, and the penalty is reasonable.

(1) The basis for indefinite suspensions include the following scenarios:

(a) Management has reasonable cause to believe that an employee committed a crime for which a sentence of imprisonment could be imposed, pending resolution of the criminal matter and any subsequent action.

(b) When management has legitimate concerns that an employee's medical condition makes their continued presence in the workplace dangerous or inappropriate, pending a determination that the employee is fit for duty.

(c) When an employee's access to classified information has been suspended or revoked and the employee must have such access to perform their job, pending a final adjudicative determination on the employee's access to classified information.

(2) The process for considering an indefinite suspension are as follows:

(a) When considering an indefinite suspension, if it is determined it is not feasible to retain the employee in a duty status during the notice period and other options are not appropriate, the employee may elect to use their own accrued leave to be placed in an appropriate leave status. Any use of an employee's accrued paid leave should not be enforced by management. Enforced leave may constitute an appealable suspension within the MSPB's jurisdiction when it extends for more than 14 days.

(b) When the condition is subsequently met, such as a final adjudication of a security clearance, or resolution of criminal charges, management should promptly return the employee to a duty status, or take other administrative action, as appropriate. An employee can remain on an indefinite suspension while management initiates the employee's removal.

(c) Unless directed to do so by an appropriate third party, an employee suspended under this provision who is later returned to duty is not entitled to back pay for the period of indefinite suspension, regardless of whether the outcome was in the employee's favor in the criminal matter or security clearance determination.

f. Alternative discipline. Alternative discipline can take many forms. Generally, alternative discipline is an effort undertaken by management to address employee misconduct using a method other than traditional discipline (for example, letter of reprimand, suspension, change to lower grade, or removal). Employees do not have an entitlement to alternative discipline. Managers may choose to use alternative discipline, but must do so under the consultation of their CPAC and servicing legal office. Alternative discipline agreements are binding agreements mutually agreed upon between management and the employee. Due to the contractual nature of the agreement, managers must request a review from their servicing legal office of all agreements before they are signed. In most cases an alternative disciplinary action is considered past discipline if the following conditions are met:

- (1) The employee was informed of the action in writing;
- (2) The action is a matter of record; and
- (3) The employee was given the opportunity to dispute the charges to a higher level official than the individual who imposed the action.

g. Crime provision. The 30-day advance notice period for adverse actions may be shortened when there is reasonable cause to believe that an employee has committed a crime for which a sentence of imprisonment may be imposed. The period of time an employee has to provide an answer to the proposed notice, including affidavits and other documentary evidence, may be reduced to a reasonable time, but not less than 7 days.

2–3. Guidelines for determining appropriate penalties

a. Table of Offenses and Penalties. The table of offenses and penalties is an integral guide for use by the management officials in determining an appropriate charge and penalty. The specific facts and circumstances of the case will be taken into account. Careful judgment must be used to ensure the penalty is proportionate to the offense.

b. The Douglas Factors. Consideration of the Douglas Factors will be formally documented in the decision letter by the deciding official during the adverse action process to demonstrate that the agency considered all relevant circumstances in reaching its decision to impose a specific disciplinary action. To effectively complete this analysis, the proposing official must ensure that they document all aggravating factors for consideration within the notice of proposal; however, they do not prepare a separate, written Douglas Factors' analysis. Aggravating factors must be included in the notice of proposal so the employee receives the opportunity to respond to their consideration, to ensure there are no due process errors. If the deciding official desires to consider aggravating factors brought to their attention that were not included in the notice of proposal, the deciding official must give the employee a reasonable opportunity to respond to the factors' consideration before reaching their final decision. This will be done in consultation with the servicing CPAC and legal office. The Douglas Factors are as follows:

(1) The nature and seriousness of the offense and its relation to the employee's duties, position, and responsibilities, including whether the offense was intentional or technical or inadvertent, or was committed maliciously or for gain, or was frequently repeated.

(2) The employee's job level and type of employment including supervisory or fiduciary role, contacts with the public, and prominence of the position.

(3) The employee's past disciplinary record.

(4) The employee's past work record, including length of service, performance on the job, ability to get along with fellow workers, and dependability.

(5) The effect of the offense upon the employee's ability to perform at a satisfactory level and its effect upon supervisor's confidence in the employee's ability to perform assigned duties.

(6) Consistency of the penalty with those imposed upon other employees for the same or similar offenses.

(7) Consistency of the penalty with any applicable DA Table of Offenses and Penalties.

(8) The notoriety of the offense or its impact upon the reputation of DA.

(9) The clarity with which the employee was on notice of any rules violated in committing the offense, and whether he or she had been warned about the conduct in question.

(10) The potential for the employee's rehabilitation.

(11) Mitigating circumstances surrounding the offense such as unusual job tensions, personality problems, mental impairment, harassment, bad faith, malice, or provocation on the part of others involved in the matter.

(12) The adequacy and effectiveness of alternative sanctions to deter such conduct in the future by the employee or others.

c. Supervisory expectations. Supervisors will be held to a higher standard than non-supervisors because they occupy positions of trust and responsibility. Therefore, occupying a supervisory position or role while engaging in misconduct may be considered an aggravating factor for determining an appropriate penalty. Any Army Civilian supervisor found to have engaged in misconduct may be considered for a more serious penalty than a non-supervisory employee engaging in the same or similar misconduct. It is the duty of all supervisors to ensure that this policy is implemented.

2–4. Additional considerations

a. Standard Form 50 remarks. When an employee, who has appeal rights and has been notified in writing of an agency action, resigns after being issued a proposal or decision notice for pending disciplinary or adverse action, the resignation SF 50 will be annotated with the appropriate legal authority code and corresponding remark in accordance with the Office of Personnel Management Guide to Processing Personnel Actions' (and/or agency regulations, as appropriate). A remark should be included that annotates the type of notice (proposal or decision), issuance date, type of action (suspension or removal) and charge(s) or reason(s) for discipline/adverse action. Failure to correctly annotate this remark will require a correction to the SF 50.

b. Performance-based actions. Performance-based actions may be effected using this regulation under 5 CFR 752 or under 5 CFR 432. Before initiating a performance-based action, the official should consider the elements required to sustain the action under either performance or disciplinary procedures. Performance-based actions taken under 5 CFR 752 still require an analysis of the Douglas Factors and must prove the following:

(1) The employee was notified that they were required to perform a particular duty;

(2) The employee's performance of the duty was unacceptable; and

(3) The manager measured the employee's performance in an accurate and reasonable manner.

c. Non-disciplinary adverse actions. Certain actions taken under this chapter are non-disciplinary in nature. These adverse actions may include charges related to an employee's deficient performance and/or their medical inability to perform. These actions are often removal actions. When the action is taken for medical inability to perform, management will coordinate with necessary parties, such as their servicing CPAC and/or EEO Office, to determine whether accommodation(s) would be feasible and/or appropriate in lieu of effecting an involuntary removal. While these actions are adverse they are not included in the Table of Offenses and Penalties since they are non-disciplinary in nature.

Chapter 3

Table of Offenses and Penalties Guidance

The Table of Offenses and Penalties is a guide that provides a suggested range of actions that can be taken for common infractions committed by employees. The deciding official has discretion to choose the penalty as proposed, but should ensure that it is proportionate to the offense. Conduct that justifies discipline of one employee does not necessarily justify similar discipline of a different employee where the employees are in different work units or chains of supervision. Furthermore, supervisors are not prohibited from removing an employee simply because they did not remove a different employee for comparable conduct. Nonetheless, employees should be treated equitably, so managers should consider appropriate comparators as they evaluate potential disciplinary actions. Removal may be considered for a first offense depending on the nature and severity of the situation. Management's deviation from table 3-1 is permissible. Management should not apply the table of offenses and penalties so rigidly as to ignore other factors.

3-1. General

The Table of Offenses and Penalties is intended for use as a guide for selecting an appropriate penalty for infractions committed by employees as it may not effectively address all situations. This table does not substitute for independent supervisory judgment and does not dictate penalties. Rather, the table provides a general framework within which supervisors exercise judgment on a case-by-case basis. The servicing CPAC provides guidance to supervisors as they navigate the Table of Offenses and Penalties. The servicing legal office reviews actions for legal sufficiency and provides advice, when needed.

3-2. Offense column

The offenses listed are not exhaustive. The fact that a specific offense is not listed does not mean a penalty cannot be imposed. Notices need not replicate the language from the offense column but should more appropriately describe the offense instead of trying to make the misconduct fit a specific label.

3-3. Penalty column

a. The penalty column lists a range of penalties from minimum to maximum for a specific type of offense. The penalty column is further divided into columns for first offense, second offense, and third offense. The penalty range typically becomes more severe based on egregious conduct or as offenses progress from first through third. Previous informal actions are not counted as previous offenses for the purpose of penalty selection. To be considered a second or third offense, the subsequent misconduct does not have to be the same or similar type of misconduct. For example, if an employee who previously was issued a letter of reprimand for a first offense for absence without leave subsequently engages in insubordination, the penalty range would be derived from the second offense column for insubordination. Also, various factors can combine to either enhance or mitigate a penalty selection. For example, the presence of multiple charges would tend to enhance a penalty selection.

b. A supervisor may choose the severity of action ranging from no penalty, informal disciplinary actions, to the maximum penalty of removal. When aggravating circumstances exist, the penalty range may be exceeded. For example, if the table shows a 14 day suspension as a maximum penalty, the supervisor may determine no penalty is needed, or may issue an oral admonishment, a written reprimand, a suspension of up to 14 days, or a penalty of greater than a 14 day suspension if there are significant aggravating circumstances. Whenever prior offenses are considered in supporting a more severe penalty, those offenses must be cited in the notice of proposed action. When a series of offenses have been committed and action could not have been taken on each before another was committed, a more severe penalty may be assessed for the combined offenses than would be appropriate for any one single offense. See table 3-1.

Internal Control Evaluation

B–1. Function

The function covered by this regulation is the management of Army’s disciplinary and adverse actions.

B–2. Purpose

The purpose of this evaluation is to assist managers in evaluating the key internal controls associated with disciplinary and adverse actions. It is intended as a guide and does not cover all controls.

B–3. Instructions

Answers to test questions must be based on the actual testing of key internal controls (for example, document analysis, direct observation, interviewing, sampling, and simulation). Answers that indicate deficiencies must be explained and corrective action identified in supporting documents. These internal controls must be evaluated at least once every 5 years. Certification that the evaluation has been conducted must be accomplished on DA Form 11–2 (Internal Control Evaluation Certification). Additionally, the CHR Plans, Analysis & Evaluation Division, Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Army (Civilian Personnel), conducts periodic reviews (evaluation and audits) to determine how effectively commanders, managers, and other stakeholders exercise their CHR disciplinary authorities in the context of mission accomplishment while maintaining the integrity of the merit system principles. Commanders may request a full or targeted CHR evaluation within their command at any time. Requests for an evaluation must be made to the CHR Plans, Analysis & Evaluation Division, Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Army (Civilian Personnel).

B–4. Test questions

- a.* Has all paperwork associated with formal disciplinary actions been provided to the servicing CPAC according to the requirements in paragraph 1–6 of this regulation?
- b.* Are case files complete and accurate according to the requirements in paragraph 1–6 of this regulation?

Section II

Terms

Adverse action

Removals (terminations of employment after completion of probationary or other initial service period), reductions in grade or pay, suspension for more than 14 days, or furloughs for 30 days or less for cause that will promote the efficiency of the service; an involuntary resignation or retirement is considered to be a removal (see 5 USC 7511–5 USC 7514 and 5 CFR 752).

Aggravating factor

Considerations that can provide a basis for enhancing the severity of a penalty. For example, supervisory status is an aggravating factor because supervisors hold positions entailing high levels of trust and agency obligation and therefore can be held to a higher standard. These factors are including, but not limited to, factors enumerated in Douglas v. Veterans Administration, 5 MSPR 280 (1981).

Charge

The label or characterization of specified conduct. The charge includes the label that names the misconduct and indicates the elements which must legally be met. The specifications are the who, what, when, where of each instance that the charged conduct occurred.

Day

A calendar day, unless otherwise noted.

Deciding official

The management official authorized to make the decision on a proposed disciplinary or adverse action.

Disciplinary action

A letter of reprimand, suspension, change to lower grade, or removal action taken by a supervisor to correct employee misconduct. Disciplinary actions may only be taken for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service.

Douglas Factors

The Douglas Factors are based on the landmark MSPB decision, Douglas v. Veterans Administration, 5 MSPR 280 (1981). This case established 12 criteria that deciding officials must consider in determining an appropriate penalty for infractions committed by an employee. Out of the 12 factors, not all will be pertinent in every instance and none are weighted. However, it is critical to balance the relevant factors in each case and choose a reasonable penalty.

Efficiency of the service

The standard for agency action. This term embraces a wide variety of considerations, including the efficiency and effectiveness of operations; the health, well-being and safety of Federal employees and property; or the ability of the agency to serve the public interest effectively by maintaining its confidence.

Electronic Official Personnel Folder

The eOPF is a web-accessible official file containing records for an individual's Federal employment career.

Employee Assistance Program

A program designed to provide confidential, professional assessment and short-term counseling/referral services to help employees and their Family members with personal, job, or Family problems.

Furlough

Placing an employee in a temporary status without duties and pay because of lack of work or funds or other non-disciplinary reasons.

Indefinite suspension

The placement of an employee in an involuntary, non-pay status for an indeterminate period of time pending investigation, inquiry, or further management action.

Informal action

Counseling sessions, admonishments, warnings, and similar actions are not formal disciplinary actions and will not be filed in the employee's eOPF.

Letter of reprimand

A memorandum issued for employee misconduct. A reprimand is the least severe formal disciplinary action. A copy is placed in the employee's eOPF for a set period of time, not to exceed 3 years.

Mitigating factor

Considerations that can provide a basis for reducing the severity of a penalty (for example, the fact that an individual acted inappropriately in response to extreme provocation). These factors are including, but not limited to, factors enumerated in Douglas v. Veterans Administration, 5 MSPR 280 (1981).

Nexus

A reasonable connection or factual relationship between the reasons for the action taken and the efficiency of the service. Nexus is presumed if the misconduct occurs while on duty or on government premises, but must be established if the misconduct occurs while the employee is not on duty or on government premises.

Oral admonishment

A non-disciplinary discussion between a supervisor and an employee to address minor misconduct.

Proposing official

The management official who proposes the disciplinary or adverse action.

Reduction in grade or pay

The assignment of an employee to a position of lower classification or grade (also known as change to lower grade).

Removal

The involuntary separation of an employee from employment with the DA.

Suspension

The placing of an employee, for disciplinary reasons, in a temporary status without duties and pay.
